CIBT

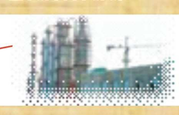
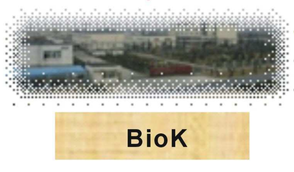
Your entry to industrial biotechnology in China

Center of Industrial Biotechnology, Shanghai and Huzhou (CIBT) is a non-profit organization in China, established under the auspices of the Shanghai branch of the Chinese Academy of Sciences and Shanghai Institutes for Biological Sciences. Affiliated with the Chinese Academy of Sciences (CAS), CIBT is able to take advantage of the rich R&D resources and infrastructure at CAS, yet it operates as an independent legal entity. The mission of CIBT is to incubate industrial biotechnologies and accelerate the commercialization of these technologies with corporate partners in China. Total revenue generated through technologies incubated at CIBT is over RMB 1 billion in 2010.





With 10,000-square-meters -facility (including a pilot plant) and 37 full-time employees, CIBT specializes in the provision of basic and applied research, bench-top fermentation, piloting and industrialization, covering products such as bio-fuels, antibiotics, amino acids, and chiral chemicals. CIBT also specializes in identifying corporate partners for technologies. In addition to serving Chinese clients, CIBT also is a research partner with leading overseas industrial biotech companies.
